

To Whom It May Concern,

I am Steven Stander, Senior English for Academic Purposes Instructor and hold a MA TESOL and PG.Dip Ed from the University of Manchester.

I confirm that I worked with Brady Fossenbell for two-and-a-half years at the Australian Centre for Education and Training, Hanoi.

It is a pleasure to be able to recommend Brady for a graduate programme. From the outset of him joining our institution it was clear that Brady had a calling for teaching. In my ten years as an ESL specialist, I have yet to meet another teacher as driven, organized, natural, passionate and professional as Brady.

During his time at ACET, I recall numerous times Brady would actively seek professional development opportunities, by engaging with colleagues, ploughing through methodology books and participating in workshops. His demeanour, focus, skill set and love of teaching will supplant any expectations a university has of him as a student.

Brady has a unique gift in being able to create and maintain motivation amongst his students and peers. This is something that led him to become a mentor for new teachers at the institution and a firm favourite with learners.

One of the strongest skill sets he has to offer is his technological background. With today's use of Content Management Systems such as Moodle and a need for more multi-media geared content to facilitate better learning, Brady has an immense head start on most teachers and other potential graduate students.

I have no doubt that Brady Fossenbell will not only be a successful graduate but also contribute greatly to the field of education.

I am happy to provide any further information you may require.
